

Your day with Liberty.

A text with a link. No app, no login, no password. Six taps in a day. The machine does everything else.

Nothing to learn. It comes to you.

Your job shows up on the phone and the phone tells you what to tap. If something is confusing, the screen is wrong, not you. Tell Luis.

1 • YOU GET A TEXT

A text with a link. That link is your job.

When the office sets the date, whoever carries the crew's phone gets a text from Liberty with the customer, the address, the date and a link. Tap the link and the whole job is there. No app, no login, no password. Keep the text: that link is your room for that job until you finish.

TEXT • LIBERTY FENCING

MK crew: Reed, Dana, 118 Palm Ave, Melbourne. Thu 9/18. The whole job is at this link: liberty.../w.html?t=... – tap HERE when you arrive, PHOTOS and DONE when you finish.

TAP THE LINK

2 • HERE

You arrive. The phone stamps it by itself.

When you drive onto the site, the phone stamps the time by itself. You touch nothing. The AQUÍ button is for the day the map is wrong. Luis sees you arrived on his screen, without calling you.

3 • THE ORDER

Read the order. Tap RECEIVED with your name.

The day's job is on your phone: the customer, the address, the drawing, the material list, what gets done. Spanish, with the English under it. Type your name and tap RECIBIDO • ENTENDIDO. That tells Luis you saw it and who received it.

RECIBIDO • ENTENDIDO

4 • PHOTOS

Say it with a picture.

Tap FOTOS, take the picture, done. It lands on the customer's file with your crew's name. Short on material? Tap the red button, FALTA MATERIAL, type what is short, and Luis sees it with the clock running. Nothing gets lost in a text.

Write to Luis in your language.

Under the order there is a line to the supervisor. Write there, in your language. Or just reply to the text you got: both land in the same place. It reaches Luis and the supervisor on the customer's file with your crew's name, and what they answer comes to you by text and shows on your link. It is a room for that job: you, Luis, the supervisor. There is no wrong place to answer.

Your words stay exactly as you wrote them. The translation beside them, marked, comes next.

TRANSLATION: COMING

RAMÓN • 9:40

Faltan 2 postes de 5x5 para la esquina del fondo.

translated: Short 2 5x5 posts for the back corner.

LUIS • 9:44

On the way, 40 minutes. Keep going on the front.

traducido: Van en camino, 40 minutos. Sigán con el frente.

Message the supervisor...

ENVIAR

You finished. Three photos or more, and DONE.

Take three or more photos of the finished work and tap LISTO. The screen tells you how many are in. With that, Luis signs the job off and the office sends the invoice, without calling you. Your day is over.

What you never have to do

- Write reports.
- Text the office. The office never writes to you; you talk to Luis.
- Speak English. Everything reaches you in your language.
- Download an app, open an account or remember a password. It is a link in a text: today's job.
- Remember anything. If there is something to do, it shows up on the phone.

WHO	WHAT THEY DO
The guys	Nothing on the phone. Arrive, work, be in the photos.
Whoever carries the phone	Gets the text, taps the link. RECEIVED with his name. Photos. Short on material. DONE. Answers Luis on the same link.
Luis · Obed · Robert · Mike	Put the crew on the job. See HERE and the photos. Answer in their language. Sign the job off on the DONE photos. Send a nugget when something has to come back.
The office	Never writes to a crew. Jonathan's material rides the order. Laura's invoice opens off Luis's sign-off.
The machine	Writes the order, sends it, translates, stamps the arrivals, counts the photos, keeps the receipt on everything. Nags nobody who did their part.

Nothing to learn. It comes to you.

This is not something to memorize. It is what is going to happen. The screen tells you what to tap. If a screen is confusing, the screen is wrong, not you. Tell Luis and Kevin fixes the screen.
